BUILT BY GUY MAUNSELL IN 1942
TO PROTECT THE THAMES ESTUARY DURING THE SECOND WORLD WAR.

At the outbreak of World War II, the Port of London was the busiest port in the world. As such, a large proportion of supplies to the UK entered by ships transiting the Thames. The Germans knew exactly what to do to put it at risk, and to this end, utilized a new secret weapon - the magnetic influence mine.

What there were different versions of this mine, in simple terms, the mine was detonated by the presence of a large magnetic field - such as a steel hull, that - passing in close proximity, without having to make physical contact. So successful was this that in the first few months of the war, over one hundred ships were sunk in the Thames Estuary alone. It was clear that urgent action was needed to stem these losses, and as most mines were laid by aircraft, ships were requisitioned and used as mobile anti-aircraft units. However, this was not altogether successful, and a more satisfactory solution was needed after their successful work.

When the forts were decommissioned in the 1950s, aspects of the forts' design were used in the early 70's for offshore oil and gas rigs and they are considered as the predecessors of modern offshore rigs.

DESTROYED 22 NAZI AIRCRAFT
30 DOODLEBUGS

THESE 100 BOTTLES would have been stationed at the fort for periods of 1-3 WEEKS AT A TIME.

5-GUN TOWERS, A SEARCHLIGHT, AND A CENTRAL CONTROL TOWER,
WHICH HAD A RADAR TO DETECT MINES LAID BY THE NAZIS. A WALKWAY WOULD ORIGINALLY HAVE CONNECTED THEM ALL TOGETHER.
